Which famous king was buried within Leicester without ceremony and why?	Richard III, who was only king for 2 years, died in battle fighting against Henry Tudor at the Battle of Bosworth. His body was quickly buried-likely due to dying at war and the rival Henry Tudor take over the crown.	What happened at the Battle of Bosworth?	It was a battle fought on 22 nd August 1485 between the Yorkist King Richard III and the Lancastrian Henry Tudor, who wanted to become king. It ended in the defeat and death of Richard.
Who was Richard the III?	Richard the III was a British Monarch who ruled from 6 th July 1483 until his death on 22 nd August 1485 at the Bosworth Battlefield Leicestershire.	Where and when were his remains discovered?	In 2012, the skeleton remains of Richard III were found in Leicester, which used to be the site of Leicester Cathedral.
Why was Richard III significant to Leicester?	He was the last English king to be killed in battle and his grave had been lost for over 500 years. It is very uncommon for a king to be been unearthed, so this gave Leicester great publicity to tourists.	How was Richard III remains discovered?	Historians knew that Richard was buried at the Friary Church at the time of his death and had an idea as to where the location was buried in Leicester-underneath the car park. Archaeologists and researchers discovered his skeleton.
